A comprehensive and up-to-date account of the languages of ancient Sicily by an international team of experts. The Catalogue of Palaearctic Coleoptera provides information about all beetles occurring in Europe, North Africa and Asia north of the tropics. The social and linguistic history of medieval Sicily is both intriguing and complex. Before the Muslim invasion of 827, the islanders spoke dialects of either Greek or Latin or both. On the arrival of the Normans around 1060 Arabic was the dominant language, but by 1250 Sicily was an almost exclusively Christian island, with Romance dialects in evidence everywhere. Of particular importance to the development of Sicily was the formative period of Norman rule (1061-1194), when most of the key transitions from an Arabic-speaking Muslim island to a 'Latin'-speaking Christian one were made. This work sets out the evidence for those changes and provides an authoritative approach that re-defines the conventional thinking on the subject. This 1995 book is a detailed study of Sicilian life and economy in the 'transitional' reign of Frederick III (1296-1337). For many immigrants, the move from Sicily to a New York tenement was accompanied by rapid, significant, and often surprisingly satisfactory changes in a wide variety of social relationships. Many of these changes can be traced to the influence of a changing housing environment. Notes on the Ciraulo/Ceraolo and allied families of Ventimiglia di Sicilia, including many Italian American immigrants. Variant spellings of the Ciraulo/Ceraolo surname did and do exist. Almost all the Ciraulos recorded in Ventimiglia through 1902 appear to descend from Giacomo, who arrived there by 1824. Many of Giacomo's descendants came to America. Paolo Ceraolo (b. ca 1862) and Rosaria Meccia had two children in Ventimiglia

and three in New York City - Nunzia, Gaetano, Nicolo, Rosaria, and Giuseppa. Giuseppe Ciraulo (b. 1858) married Giuseppa Cancasei in nearby Caccamo, where they had five children that later settled in Chicago - Gaetano, Vincenzo, Maria Nunzia, Salvatore, and Pietro. Others came to America, as well. The key allied families are Bufalo, Meccia, and Genovese. See the pedigree charts for a quick overview. (No living descendants are documented). When Archaeology Meets Communities examines the history of nineteenth-century Sicilian archaeology through the archival documentation for the excavations at Tindari, Lipari and nearby minor sites in the Messina province, from Italy's Unification to the end of the First World War (1861-1918). This addition to the Manchester Medieval Sources Series provides a translation of, and the historical background to, the History of the Tyrants of Sicily by Hugo Falcandus. The text also offers a historiographical examination of the text. This book explores the linguistic expression of identity, intended as the social positioning of self and others, by focusing mostly on a scenario of prolonged language contact, namely the ancient Mediterranean area. The volume includes studies on language contact and on identity strategies developed at different levels of analysis, from phonetics to pragmatics, in, among others, Latin, Greek, Coptic, Syriac, (Cypriot) Arabic, Medieval Sardinian.
