An internal combustion engine (ICE) is a heat engine in which the combustion of a fuel occurs with an oxidizer (usually air) in a combustion chamber that is an integral part of the working fluid flow circuit. In an internal combustion engine, the expansion of the high-temperature and high-pressure gases produced by combustion applies direct force to some component of the engine. The force is applied typically to pistons, turbine blades, a rotor, or a nozzle. This force moves the component over a distance, transforming chemical energy into useful work.

This replaced the external combustion engine for applications where weight or size of the engine is important. Machine design is the single most important activity in the mechanical industries. Success or failure of a company has its roots in product design, whether it is done in-house or contracted out. It is here that manufacturing costs and profits are determined.
